

Top Texas Races in November

Start the argument. There are more than 100 races on the November ballot in Texas with candidates from each of the two major parties. But which ones will be hotly contested, with viable candidates, lots of money, lots of ads and lots of attention? This is our early summer hotlist, and we know from years past that it'll change in a dozen ways before the voting starts. These aren't the only races of interest, and some will fall off the list as others are added, candidates make mistakes, money vaporizes and all of that stuff that makes politics interesting in the first place. Left off, but worth your attention: The special election race to replace Republican Sen. Kyle Janek of Houston in SD-17. Candidates can file until August 29, and both parties consider the seat competitive, with a Republican lean.

Incumbents' names are in bold. And here's how the Texas Weekly Index (TWI) works: It's the average difference between statewide Republicans and statewide Democrats in contested elections in 2004 and 2006, by district. If it's red (or a negative number) Republicans did better in that district; if it's blue (or a positive number), Democrats did better. It's not meant to predict results, but to give you a quick look at recent political history in each district.
