DEE MARGO
FOR EL PASO

Thirty years ago, my daughter Adair and her new husband, Dee Margo, moved to El Paso. For Adair, it was a homecoming. Her great-grandparents had moved here at the turn of the century. For Dee, El Paso was a place to finally plant roots and raise a family.

My husband, Wake Wakefield, hired Dee as a commissioned salesman at John D. Williams, a company my father started. Dee worked hard from day one and excelled. Building strong relationships came naturally to him, and he always saw to it that his customers were fully satisfied. Wake often commented on Dee's drive and commitment, and he was impressed by his love of El Paso.

Dee was learning the ropes and working his way up when in February, 1981 Wake died suddenly of a heart attack. Losing Wake was a tremendous loss for our family, and Dee was still relatively new, with no experience running a company. It was a time fraught with uncertainty, but Dee made a commitment to make things work.

Again, Dee diligently worked to save JDW and to make it strong. He hired good people and, as the company grew, so did Dee. He was and is a great father to my two grandsons, Wake and Don. Dee has also been instrumental in helping El Paso grow, adding better jobs and looking out for those in need by helping many worthy causes, including winter coats for children through Operation Noel.

It is definitely my nature to stay out of politics, but I have noticed and been frustrated that some are trying to paint Dee as something he is not. For thirty years his roots have grown strong in El Paso. As your state representative, he will make sure that you and El Paso are represented, and that our future is bright.

Most days when I talk to Dee he tells me he is knocking on doors and personally asking for support. I hope you will honor Dee with your vote. Like me, you will be proud of what Dee can accomplish.

Sincerely,

Betty Ruth Wakefield Haley

P.S. When you see Dee will you please remind him not to be late for Monday dinner?
