Should David Dewhurst have done anything to help get his relative out of jail in Allen?

- "Bad on many levels - poor judgment for the Lt. Gov to call. Plus he wasn't even successful. Since he felt compelled to take action, he should have engaged an attorney on his relative's behalf."
- "A quick call to inquire about her status might have been OK, but that's it."
- "He should have contacted a good lawyer PERIOD."
- "His instinct to help was admirable, but his approach was flawed. It would have been better to have a legal representative make the contact and provide financial help to the relative if and as needed."
- "That's what you have staff for. You don't know anyone who can make the call, say, I don't know, a Senator?? Amateur."
- "He should have called his lawyer and then let his lawyer handle it."
- "Family is family, but..."
- "Although the overall tone of the phone call was polite, he probably shouldn't have immediately identified himself as the Lieutenant Governor."
- "Well, it's one of those calls to tell your relative you will make but you don't."

- "But not what he did. He could have followed the process, and tried to post bond through the central jail, without throwing his position around."
- "Yes, but giving his résumé over the phone was over the line."
- "I admire his misuse of political power on behalf of a relative. So much better than 'get on down the road'."
- "He should have called a lawyer to deal with it like the rest of us would have."
- "Have a lawyer, staffer, or friend call like every other public official does."
- "How about hire her a lawyer and staying out of the way. Poor judgment by David and not helpful politically."
- "Called one of his lawyer friends"
- "You should take a good look at yourself if you are one that is pounding on the Dew for helping his relative. There is something wrong with those that are not willing to help a relative because of the political consequence it will present."
- "He should have called the best attorney he knows in Allen to make that call for him."
- "He should have not used his taxpayer funded and politically derived influence."
- "As a private citizen it is beholden of us to want to help family out in crisis, but when your the 'Lt. Gov of the State of Texas' don't throw your weight and title around like its a 'get out of jail' free card."
- "Hire a lawyer"
- "But, but, but, don't you know who I am?????"
- "Helping a relative is not the issue. How he went about it is the issue."
- "Remember Lt Gov Rick Perry leaning on the DPS officer during the traffic stop to let his suburban just 'get on down the road?' Elected officials should delegate police issues to friends, staff or attorneys . . . and stay out of it personally."
- "Of course he should help his relatives, he'd be in the doghouse at Thanksgiving if he didn't. He should have called a bail bondsman like everyone else does."
- "Would you leave a relative that you've known for more than 30 years as a dedicated elementary school teacher without help in such a situation? Are we assuming guilt or innocence? I think we should assume innocence until PROVEN guilty."
- "Sure... one should always help relatives in need of legal help... so call an attorney..."
- "But not act like a fool,"
- "Called a good attorney in Collin County, duh?"
- "Sure. Hire a lawyer and post bond."
- "Call a lawyer!"
- "There is no shame in using all legal avenues to help a relative in trouble including springing them from jail. People are acting like what he did was unheard of in all history, but it happens every day."

- "Hire a lawyer."
- "Call a lawyer who can arrange for bail"
- "Yes. Call a lawyer."
- "An inquiry is legit, you making it is not. P.S. if you don't know the County Judge and Sheriff, don't tell anyone. Moron."
- "He should not have brought up his title so much."
- "Sure, he should do the same thing anyone else would do to help a family member. Show up and pay bail."
- "It was nice of him to try to help out...he just shouldn't have called 911 in an effort to use his title to do so."
- "Yes, but he should have called the best lawyer money can buy in Collin County, not the Allen Police Department."
- "Have contacted a competent local criminal defense lawyer."
- "Sure, not sure he should have leaned on them but..."
- "Yes. His only minor wrongdoing was trying to gently pull rank on the cop."
- "Any of us would do whatever we could to get a relative out of jail and the Lt. Gov. should have done what any of us would have done -- called and asked what steps he needed to take, Instead, he tried to throw his weight around. What is damning about this is his lack of judgment, and not just politically. How could he have thought that what he was doing would help his relative?"

- "But he could have handled it better by retaining an attorney to handle, or just taking the officer up on the option to pay bail that night."
- "Not when he had been drinking Rombauer Chardonnay for a few hours."
- "As a concerned relative, I understand his desire to help. But for he, himself, to pick up the phone and call the PD was probably not the best way to handle it."
- "Yes but you do not call 911."
- "This guy was in the CIA?"
- "But be smarts Dave. There are better ways. And hey Dave maybe do your homework and figure out how the system works first. You called the wrong folks."
- "Rookie mistake. You can make those calls after an election, but not heading into one. Then again, what *hasn't* the Dew been tone-deaf about during his reign?"
- "Normally I say yes but in the Dew's case he can't help himself of much less anyone else"
- "Anyone can call to help a relative get out of jail. You call a bail bond office. Or, if you are going to try and use power and influence, learn how to do it right."
- "After 10 years in office, if the best he can do is make a drunk, personal call, it shows how far down he has brought the office."

- "I have mixed feelings. People do that sort of thing for family and friends. But, the price of a night in jail is pretty cheap compared to the price of two weeks of news coverage about it."

- "He should have handled it differently."

- "It's not a sin to help a relative. It is however inappropriate to mention, several times, that you are the Lt. Gov. of the State of Texas when you are doing it."

- "Of course.... call a lawyer friend in the area and have him check it out...."

- "Call a lawyer..."

- "Stupid Stupid Stupid"

- "Should have called a lawyer, like anyone else"

- "He should have called an attorney...instead of drunk-dialing!"

- "Stupid is as stupid does."

- "And he really didn't."

- "Ok to help. Probably not best to have called 911. Less rambling would have also been good."

- "Only what average citizen could have done. Provide bail?"

- "Call a lawyer like everyone else"

- "Except maybe post bond."

- "Made to order campaign issue."

- "Not what he did"

On a scale of 1 to 5, where 1 is a big deal and 5 is nothing at all, how damaging — politically speaking — is Dewhurst's taped phone call with City of Allen Police?

- "One more drip in sad flow of missteps."

- "Just the latest slice in his political death by a thousand cuts."

- "It would have been a 1 but he sounded like a damned wuss republican!"

- "Wouldn't have been so bad if Dewhurst hasn't had such bad luck over the last few years. Just seems to reinforce the idea that he can't do anything exactly right and things never seem to go his way."

- "A regular citizen knows that the best way to get a friend or relative out of jail is to post bond with an attorney. Either he is so removed from everyday life that he lacks common sense, or he thought his position would have some influence. Either way, it hurts him."

- "The problem is that it feeds into a politically awkward and ineffectual narrative."

- "You'd think it would be the last straw in the Lt Gov's political career, but in reality probably half the public forgot about it as soon as Miley hit the stage, and the other half are just wishing they had a relative who could do that for them."

- "It speaks more to his weakness than anything untoward."
- "At least he didn't say, 'Do you know who I am?' and, 'Why don't you just let us get along down the road.'"
- "Reaffirms tea party cynicism toward the elitist/ruling class sense of privilege and corporate entitlement"
- "He's so wounded at this point from the cumulative missteps he's made since starting his U.S. Senate campaign that, at this stage, incidents like this feed into his strongly-established negatives."
- "The most damaging part of the tale to me was that he didn't know you can now self-checkout at the grocery store. You'd think #1 Pick would know that."
- "People understand using your position in order to obtain favors, and they generally frown upon it."
- "And this guy was in the CIA? No wonder Morales is President."
- "While it's not the full-blown season yet, when it is, the tape will be run over and over again by his nasty opponents. And he sounds drunk to boot, which I can't believe no one has yet mentioned."
- "It's editable and distributable in this age of"
- "The recording was a political gift personally wrapped by Dewhurst and delivered to his opponents. I seriously doubt he can recover from all of his political mistakes. The odds of him making it to a run-off is slim to none."

- "If this was an anomaly it would be fine. The problem is that it shows Dew's continued political ineptness."
- "Timing is everything and this couldn't have happened at a worse time. Politically, next to last nail in coffin."
- "It is the least of his worries. It is a petty point and why raise it when there are many more substantive issues to raise in an effort to hurt or discredit him."
- "Pretty big deal now, but short-term memories will prevail, as usual."
- "No one likes that guy who plays the 'Do you know who I am?' card. Regardless how he spins it, Dewhurst is that guy."
- "This is harmful mainly because voters can see that Dewhurst's explanation contradicts what the tape shows: he was throwing his weight around (in a surprisingly ham-handed way) and, despite telling the officer he wanted to follow the typical procedure, he was clearly fishing for special treatment."
- "It's a big screw-up. But wait, there are even more colossal screw-ups still to come. That boy is snake-bit."
- "NONE of the candidates are perfect. Each has faults."
- "Hard to handicap because: 1.) Dewhurst is hurt anyways and 2.) The public has such a poor image of elected officials that few things bother them much anymore. That said, anytime you are taped doing something (video or audio) it can really be used against you in a serious way."

- "I'm not sure it is any more damaging than his shenanigans over the special sessions or the lack of control in the filibuster, but it can't help. This is about optics and honestly for someone about to be challenged seriously this was a bush league move."

- "Is more significant because it reinforces idea of damaged goods after Cruz defeat and his handling of abortion debate."

- "Depends on how it's portrayed in February 2014. And how honest Gov. Dewhurst is with voters about it."

- "It is not a big deal but opportunists will keep it alive. I can still hear Staples chuckling 'giggity giggity'"

- "Law enforcement groups have a license to pick another candidate."

- "These things can be innocuous but if they feed a credible narrative regarding the candidate, they can become the face of the narrative. In this case: out of touch rich guy who thinks he is above the law. Roll the tape."

- "If he didn't already have a reputation for being above the lives of ordinary people, it wouldn't hurt so much."

- "If CSCOPE can be trumped up, why not this?"

- "I'm not sure anyone is truly surprised by a lapse of judgment by a politician. I think the surprise would be learning that someone didn't capitalize on their officeholder status."

- "For anyone else, it probably would've been closer to a 5. But the snowball named Dewhurst is gathering more and more debris as it rapidly moves downhill."

- "It was kind of pathetic, really. Sort of like a woman flashing a cop some skin to try to get out of a traffic ticket."

- "Dewhurst was already in such a hole that it is hard to imagine this made it much worse. Politically, he is a dead man walking."

- "It gives his opponent something to ding him with, but I don't think the average voter will hold it against him. He doesn't have a reputation of being a big bully around the state."

- "Totally nothing at all. Dewhurst simply doesn't have any opponent with money or Ted Cruz-like appeal. Even if this story had any legs, there's no opponent with the resources who can do anything with it. Dewhurst will beat these guys, probably without a runoff."

- "A case study needs to be written when he finishes 3rd in the primary on his slide down."

- "He did not ask for anything other than information, but that is not how the general public will interpret it. Probably should not have mentioned the No. #1 pick thing."

- "By itself, the incident is not a big deal. However, it feeds a larger narrative of incompetence by the lieutenant governor. Also, it makes great fodder for an attack ad."

- "Who calls 911? Why not call his staff and find a lawyer or someone that could help."
- "It depends on what his opponents do with it."
- "Reminds me of the joke where the guy puts a gun to his head and says stop me before I kill again"
- "At least one of his opponents will play time and time again about his abuse of power."

- "Probably a small deal come this next spring, but it hurts now."
- "Politically speaking, he's the only one that doesn't realize that he damaged!!"
- "It's another straw on the camel's back -- joining many already there."
- "The call itself is not damaging...but this shows a pattern of bad judgment."
- "Another blow. They add up."
- "Call a lawyer or have one of your minions call a lawyer."

Should Attorney General Greg Abbott be trying to stop the American Airlines merger?

- "In a GOP primary, how does siding with Eric Holder and the Obama Justice Department help him?"
- "His conservative critics, including the Dallas Chamber, are using a support business and jobs narrative, Abbott has said but should stress more that his goal is to protect consumers from higher airfares."
- "Obviously a donor is influencing his decision. It will come out sooner or later who is pulling his strings."
- "The proper question should be: Should the State of Texas be trying to stop the AA merger. Abbott's not acting in his personal capacity, he's doing it as the top lawyer for the state, so the question should be whether the State has a dog in that fight, and clearly it does--anti-trust, competition, etc. issues galore!"
- "You've got Rick Perry mau-mauing other states about our business climate and the presumptive next Attorney General is taking on a job killer mission w/a major Texas employer?"
- "It's probably not good for the airline industry to reduce competition at this point -- anyone familiar with American's underwhelming service and take-it-or-leave it attitude is afraid of the carrier gaining the market share it will with the merger. While I am frankly surprised that Abbott is fighting it, it's the right thing to do."
- "Maybe two years ago, but not when you're running for governor in a state where one of the largest employers is American Airlines."

- "How can any self respecting business republican want government involved in business."
- "Perfect chance for Wendy Davis to demonstrate her commitment to the Texas economy."
- "It does not help him win support in N. Texas."
- "Probably sought to stop united continental merger too as airline industry is increasingly non competitive."
- "We are capitalists and should govern like capitalists. What was all that talk about limited government?"
- "The what? Is Jimmy Carter president again?"
- "What a dumb move; to go against one of the state's biggest employers where a lot of employees could have been future Abbott voters! I'm still laughing."
- "Let the free market determine the winners and losers. Competition will be there with or without the merger."
- "His legal 'interventions' haven't exactly been fruitful as of late."
- "Politically, probably not. Abbott has built a reputation of suing Obama and that makes it hard for Abbott to explain why he is joining Obama in suing a Texas company. But legally, no way to know the right answer because antitrust questions are ungodly tangled and complex, depending on detailed industry data and expert economic testimony."
- "He's on the wrong side of the issue. Anytime you side with the Obama DOJ, you're on the wrong side of the issue."
- "His op-ed didn't give convincing arguments for doing so."
- "Big mistake,"
- "There is plenty of competition in DFW between American and Southwest Airlines. What about Continental and United? What is he doing?"
- "No way. One bad combined airline is better for Texas than a bankrupt airline and a bad smaller airline."
- "Shouldn't Abbott be supporting free-market competition?"
- "Ah, he only sues the Feds."
- "I thought repubs were all for free enterprise and business to be allowed to make as much money a possible."
- "More importantly, how will the universe react to Abbott and the Obama Administration being on the same side of an issue?"
- "Not unless someone is breaking the law."
- "I really think this is a job for the federal government, and that he should stay out of it."
- "It's law and fact dependent, and I really don't know either well enough to answer."
- "Why is Abbott playing small ball with this issue? Use broad strokes and coast to primary victory."

- "He has stepped into something smelly in North Texas. AA is a major Texas employer. The airline's future is tenuous without the merger. AA's failure would have a profound negative impact on the North Texas economy. I understand the 'competition' argument, but what about all those Texas employees who will lose their jobs if the airline fails? It is a strategic error for him to pursue this matter at this time."

- "I am sure there is a good reason to intervene but this should be better communicated. If AA cannot merge, what is the end game? Do they proceed to liquidation in bankruptcy?"

- "Someone needs to look into how much money Abbott has taken from Southwest."

- "It is a legal fight he doesn't have a business in."

- "Seems the Republicans want less government involvement except for their specific issue of choice, and then they want government to micromanage our lives. They seem particularly interested in women."

- "Let the market dictate the outcome."

- "Becoming a litigious fool...."

- "It's absolutely mystifying.... no clear reason for this intervention has been articulated"

- "Heck no!"

- "No! Why? It just makes no sense legally or politically."

- "No. That is the federal government's job. Since, he appears to be so concerned with what the federal government is doing, I would suggest he is running for the wrong office."

- "AA will fail without the merger

Should the U.S. Department of Justice be suing Texas to block its voter photo ID law?

- "No brainer. Texas is a poster child for blatant, intentional discrimination. Even Abbott's defense of partisan redistricting explicitly acknowledged that race was considered, even if as a proxy for party."

- "It isn't hyperbole to say it is a modern-day Jim Crow law. It disproportionately affects minorities and the poor."

- "The DOJ also shouldn't be selling guns to Mexican drug cartels, but oh well. How about the DOJ prosecute voter intimidation and fraud cases."

- "We have time honored tradition of minority voter suppression--res ipsa loquitor"

- "Seriously? Of course it should. The Straus-led House has repeatedly voted for voter suppression measures and will continue to do so until stopped. The open secret is that Republicans need to reduce minority turnout while maximizing white turnout to succeed electorally."

- "Eric Holder is an ass."
- "ABSOLUTELY!!!"
- "It's time for Obama to stop the war on Texas"
- "My grandparents and parents were poorer than poor in Mexico, yet they had their voting ID card (credential) and did not miss a vote. It's time for Democrats to stop playing the victim and stop demeaning the poor."
- "The total number of poor whites in the state is bigger than the total number of poor Hispanics and blacks. Yet Justice is trying to claim that a voting law somehow affects poor people more than others (and it has no evidence that is true), because of racially disparate poverty rates, but there is no evidence of voting discrimination and therefore no violation of Section 2."
- "Only if what Texas is doing is illegal or unconstitutional."
- "The Feds want to make someone the example. Texas gets cast in that role (again)."
- "Passing the Voter ID law was much more symbolism than substance; the Obama lawsuit against Texas Voter ID is much more symbolism than substance."
- "For sure - other states can have voter ID laws, but not Texas. That's justice."
- "Racial sensitivities have gone wild without just cause."

• "DOJ needs to find something better to do. Like track down guns sold to Mexican drug cartels, for instance."

• "They lost but Washington has already decided to let the current administration do what it wants."

• "The state's history of intentional discrimination (which hasn't ended yet) is precisely why voters here need federal protection."

• "'Illegal' immigrants do not attempt to vote! This is a stupid law!!!"

• "The DOJ's redistricting suit is pure partisan politics and the Obama DOJ is in the wrong. The Texas voter photo ID law is pure partisan politics and Texas is in the wrong. The DOJ should be suing because the law does nothing but disenfranchise voters."

• "C'mon, really. Who doesn't have an ID?"

• "When big Democrats like Eric Holder take such intellectually dishonest and cynical steps, it justifies every crazy thing that the right wing does to counter them. Every sane American knows that no one will be deprived of the right to vote because they do not have a photo ID. No one, zip, nada. Still Holder and the media create division and race bait by opposing a photo ID and pretending they are standing on principle. We are so far beyond this. How many election cycles are we away from a thumb or iris scan."

• "They'll lose."

• "Good grief."

- "Why good gracious why do I forget there is only racism south of the Mason Dixon line."

- "The current Justice Department has been politicized to the point of absurdity under this administration. Holder is an embarrassment."

- "If it is okay for the R's to play politics with voter laws, why not the D's."

- "No. Stay out of our business. I have to show my driver's license for everything. That being said, Texas should have allowed other forms of picture ID, like school IDs, to be used."

- "They need to stay out of individual state's issues. Texas is quite capable of governing itself."

- "Obama gets up every morning hating. He thinks we care. The more he tries to tell us what to do, the more we will resist. And in Texas, resistance isn't futile, it's genetic."

- "Another overreach by the race-obsessed Obama administration"

- "Let the DOJ prove the law is discriminatory in court."

Should Ted Cruz renounce his Canadian dual citizenship?

- "He's never going to be president anyway, so who cares?"

- "Kind of funny to see the whole birther thing does still persist in some form on the other side, or at least Cruz postures like it matters."

- "While I believe he behaves a little too ambitiously and needs to pay his dues, I see this as nothing more than an attempt by Democrats and their allies in the press to discredit him. So what? I wasn't a birther either, but I opposed Obama on policy (and believed he wasn't ready either which does appear to be the case)."

- "Given his political persona, he needs to, but in the real world its just entertainment."

- "I mean, only if he wants to be elected in the United States."

- "I'd rather him renounce his extremist positions that place him at the fringe of the fringe."

- "Pandering at it worst- how much more blatantly political do you need to be to be seen through? Denying your heritage, what's next for expediency?"

- "Isn't he also Cuban?"

- "Caught in a trap of his own invention, eh? Take off the to great brown south, cubano."

- "Who cares? Cruz doesn't display any of the nicer qualities associated with Canadians -- the Canadians probably want him to renounce it!"

- "You should not have dual allegiance to a foreign country - even Canada. I know Senate employees can't."

- "I don't care. If he runs for president I guess he should. But really, who cares."
- "Maple syrup y chorizo?"
- "Don't know or care."
- "He will need some place to retire when voters figure him out."
- "Who cares?"
- "What about his Cuban citizenship by virtue of his birth to a Cuban father?"
- "While his at it, he should also denounce his Cuban citizenship. We have a Senator who is a legal citizen of Cuba, Canada, and America all at the same time and who wants to be president. Doesn't the Book of Revelations mention something about this?"
- "He should run for President of Canada and President of the United State, unite the Northern Hemisphere and join us with Mexico to form the North American Free Trade Union."
- "Does it really matter?"
- "Who cares but the idiots he caters to."
- "It is completely irrelevant. He should stand up and say so. What, do we think he is a spy for Canada, or is somehow disloyal to the U.S. because the circumstances of his birth accorded him dual citizenship in our extremely friendly ally and neighbor to the North?"
- "This entire ordeal is foolishness, just like the Obama birther argument."
- "Sad to say, but explicitly renouncing Canada may give Cruz some upside on the birther issue."
- "Why would anyone want Canadian citizenship?!"
- "Since Michelle Obama proclaimed Obama's homeland as Kenya, many Americans think it wise to be more careful in the future to make absolutely sure where a candidate's allegiances lie."
- "I think Canada should renounce Ted Cruz"
- "Why is he so worried about it? Surely he is content in the United States Senate."
- "After a few more years under the President's 'economic recovery', Canada might not look like such a bad spot to move. For that reason alone, Sen. Cruz might want to keep it."
- "The timing of his decision to renounce his Canadian citizenship makes it appear as if he is doing so purely for political reasons."
- "He said he wants to because his allegiance is the U.S. If he wants to do, then he should do it."
- "Don't care"
- "It will remain a story until he does."
- "Although it would have been nice if he could have been screwing with only 35 million people, instead of 315 million."
- "Priceless."

- "Who cares?? But I do want to point out to all the CRAZIES that President Obama was born in Honolulu, Hawaii - to an AMERICAN citizen mother! He is an AMERICAN CITIZEN (you inbred Jeds!)"
- "From a legal standpoint, I don't think an elected U.S. official should have dual citizenship. From a comedic one, it has been great to observe the actions and comments coming from the same people who questioned the current White House occupier's status."
- "Yes, but only if he is considering a presidential run."
- "Of course he should. One country is enough."
- "Who cares?"
- "It would come in handy backpacking across Europe."
- "If he has any intention to run for President, for appearances sake, there should be no question whatsoever about his allegiance."
- "I thought Canadians were supposed to be nice."
- "Sure. The Canadians can't retaliate. What are they going to do, stop exporting hockey mullets to the US? Big whoop."
- "And then his Texas Citizenship"
- "It is time to set up a Cruz birther investigative unit. If his alleged birth certificate in in French we will know he is a plant sent by the French to take over America."
- "Don't care is the more appropriate response. He should have been designated in high school as the individual most likely to do irreparable harm to the Republican Party in Texas."
- "Actually, I don't mean I 'Don't Know.' You didn't have a box for I 'Don't Care.'"
- "Absolutely not, he should embrace it."
- "He needs to clear the issue"
- "Ted is credibly a Texan. He should have renounced his citizenship even if he were from Oklahoma. He knows that."
- "It's a distraction. He is smart to get it out of the way."
- "Who cares."
- "Where are the birthers now?"
- "Still baffled why Dewhurst didn't raise Cruz's birthplace, and continued citizenship in a non-US country, when Cruz was asking voters to let him serve in the United States Senate."
- "Doesn't matter"
- "Two quotes, please: 'We should renounce his U.S. citizenship.' 'Explain to me how this is different than what so many claimed prevented Obama from serving?'"
- "But I still think he's ineligible to be President."
- "Could he go back to Canada?"
