Beto O'Rourke Announces Local and Statewide Endorsements Ahead of Midterm Election

Beto will work alongside these leaders to unify Texans around the popular things we want to accomplish together like creating great jobs, investing in world-class schools, expanding health care, restoring reproductive rights and passing commonsense gun safety measures that will keep kids safe.

Houston – Beto O'Rourke announced his endorsements of nearly 230 elected officials and candidates for local and statewide office across Texas on Tuesday as he builds an inclusive and diverse coalition of champions who will move Texas forward and bring real leadership to the state up and down the ballot.

The stakes of this election could not be higher: Another term with Greg Abbott as governor would mean the privatization of public schools, further attacks on women's rights, a deficient power grid, Texas remaining the least insured state, and higher inflation for families. Together, Beto and these leaders at the local and state level will unify Texans around the popular things we want to accomplish together like creating great jobs, investing in world-class schools, expanding health care, restoring reproductive rights and passing commonsense gun safety measures that will keep kids safe.

“By working together up and down the ballot, we are going to overcome the extremism we see in this state today and deliver for the people of Texas,” Beto

O'Rourke said. "I am excited to announce this slate of endorsements that reflect the diversity of our movement and the unifying vision that will bring Texans together in every part of this state so we do the big things: Create great jobs, invest in world-class schools, keep our kids safe, restore reproductive freedom to the women of Texas and ensure more people have the ability to be healthy enough to live to their full potential."
