

Texas Weekly's Hot List

The most competitive races in the Texas General Election

We lifted this idea from the inventors of the federal terror watch, ranking districts by the threat to each incumbent (or incumbent party, in the case of open districts) and giving each group garish colors. Yellow means there's trouble on the sidewalk. Orange is trouble on the front porch. Red is trouble walking in the door. Incumbents' names are in bold. And a note for candidates and consultants whose nerves are shot: Within each color zone, the races are listed by district number — not by order of risk. Step away from the coffee pots, folks.

This week's changes: Linda Harper-Brown, in trouble since news she was driving a Mercedes owned by a company that employed her husband and that has business with the state, moves to orange from red as things have calmed (some) in HD-105. We've raised the HD-45 race to orange, like we said we would, in part because the contest has taken over TVs in the Austin market and we take that as one sign of a competitive race. Last, we added two races where campaign ops are active: HD-106, where Kirk England is the incumbent, and HD-149, where Hubert Vo is the state rep. Both are Democrats. Campaign finance reports are due with the state on Monday, and will help shape the final list before Election Day next week. Those will reflect contributions and spending through October 23, and they're the last full reports due before January. Candidates have to report contributions of more than $1,000 between Monday and Election Day as the money comes in.
